v.

The Springs at Centennial Ranch
Homeowners Association, et al.,

Defendants

Case No.: 2:17-cv-01673-JAD-EJY

Order Denying Motions for Reconsideration and Default Judgment

[ECF Nos. 108, 116, 117]

The Bank of New York Mellon brought this quiet-title action to determine the effect of a homeowners' association non-judicial foreclosure sale on its deed of trust securing the mortgage on a home. Although I dismissed the bank's claim as time-barred, I found that the untimeliness of that action did not preclude the bank from asserting its tender theory as an affirmative defense to foreclosure-sale purchaser SFR Investments Pool 1, LLC on its quiet-title claim.¹ SFR asks me to reconsider that ruling, arguing that the bank's tender theory is now just a time-barred claim masquerading as an affirmative defense, so it, too, should be precluded. Because the Nevada Supreme Court has expressly held that statutes of limitations do not apply to a tender defense, I deny SFR's request for reconsideration. SFR also moves for a default judgment against Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc (MERS), the original beneficiary in the deed-of-

1 trust chain. Because the default judgment that SFR seeks would have a ripple effect on the 2 bank's defenses, I deny that motion as premature under the Frow doctrine.

3 I. SFR's Motion for Partial Reconsideration [ECF No. 108]

4 In an April 8, 2019, order, I resolved the parties' competing motions for summary 5 judgment. The bank argued primarily that its agent's $483.75 pre-sale tender satisfied the 6 superpriority portion of the lien and preserved its deed of trust.² SFR and the Springs at 7 Centennial Ranch HOA argued that the bank's claims are governed by a three- or four-year
8 statute of limitation and are thus time-barred, and SFR asked for summary judgment against the 9 bank and MERS on its counterclaims.³ I found that the bank's claims are governed—and time-
10 barred—by a four-year statute of limitations, so I dismissed those claims.⁴ But I denied
11 summary judgment for SFR because genuine issues of fact surrounding the bank's affirmative
12 defense of tender precluded such relief.⁵

13 SFR argues that this holding was error: if the bank's tender claim is time-barred, so is its 14 affirmative defense based on these same facts.⁶ But SFR's argument ignores Nevada law, which 15 has long recognized that "[l]imitations do not run against defenses. The statute is available only 16 as a shield, not as a sword."⁷ In Nevada State Bank v. Jamison Family Partnership,⁸ the Nevada
17 Supreme Court held that a bank's time-barred deficiency claims could be asserted as affirmative

1 defenses to equitable claims arising from a foreclosure sale. The Nevada Supreme Court relied 2 on Jamison Family Partnership last month when it held in an unpublished decision in Renfroe v.
3 Carrington Mortgage Services, LLC, that the holder of a deed of trust can assert tender as an 4 affirmative defense in an HOA foreclosure action even if an affirmative claim based on that 5 theory would be time-barred⁹:

6 Renfroe’s argument that [deed-of-trust holder] Carrington was 7 time-barred from asserting that [its predecessor’s] tender preserved
8 its deed of trust is also incorrect. Statutes of limitations do not run 9 against defenses.¹⁰ We conclude that Carrington, as a defendant, 10 may assert its affirmative defense notwithstanding the statute of 11 limitations. Moreover, we clarify that Carrington had no obligation to prevail in a judicial action as a condition precedent to enforcing its deed of trust that had already survived the HOA’s foreclosure sale. Therefore, it was proper for Carrington to respond to Renfroe’s suit by explaining that its deed of trust was preserved upon tender, and it was not time-barred from doing so.¹¹

12 Here, the bank stands in the same position as Carrington in Renfroe. Though the Renfroe 13 decision is unpublished, it is grounded in well-established Nevada legal principles. I find that, if 14 given the opportunity to revisit the question that SFR presents here, the Nevada Supreme Court 15 would reach the same conclusion it did in Renfroe. So I maintain the bank’s tender defense is 16 not time-barred even though its quiet-title claim based on the same theory is.

17 SFR’s alternative theory that this defense is moot because the dismissal of the bank’s 18 claims also mooted SFR’s counterclaims fares no better. To make this argument, SFR cites only 19 to the general proposition in Already, LLC v. Nike, Inc. that “A case becomes moot—and 14, 2020).

22 ¹⁰ The Nevada Supreme Court also cited City of St. Paul v. Evans, 344 F.3d 1029 (9th Cir.
2003)—which SFR itself relies on, see ECF No. 108 at 3—to support its conclusion that the statute of limitations cannot be used as a sword against affirmative defenses. See id.

¹¹ Id. (internal citations omitted).

1 therefore no longer a ‘Case’ or ‘Controversy’ for purposes of Article III—‘when the issues
2 presented are no longer live or the parties lack a legally cognizable interest in the outcome.’”¹²

3 But the Already case centered on the voluntary-cessation doctrine and considered whether Nike’s
4 dismissal of trademark-infringement claims and execution of a broad covenant not to sue mooted
5 Already’s counterclaim, which challenged the validity of Nike’s trademark. The High Court
6 found Already’s counterclaim moot because, “given the breadth of the covenant,” Already’s
7 injury could not “reasonably be expected to recur,” so “the case is clearly moot.”¹³

8 The dissimilar procedural posture here renders Already inapplicable. The bank has not 9 broadly released all of its claims and defenses as Nike did. Plus, SFR’s claims go beyond the 10 scope of Already’s. SFR seeks a three-part declaration that “(1) SFR is the title owner of the 11 Property; (2) the Association Foreclosure Deed is valid and enforceable; and (3) SFR’s rights 12 and interest in the Property are superior to any adverse interest claimed by the Bank” and 13 MERS.¹⁴ SFR is also pursuing a default judgment against MERS that would invalidate MERS’s
14 interest and that of its assigns.¹⁵ So SFR has not shown that its claims, and thus the bank’s
15 tender defense, have been mooted by my dismissal of the bank’s claims.¹⁶

16 II. Application for Default Judgment Against MERS [ECF No. 117]

17 Having secured the entry of default against MERS,¹⁷ SFR now moves for a default
18 judgment declaring “that MERS, [and] any successors and assigns, have no right, title, or interest

1 in the Property.”¹⁸ The Ninth Circuit follows the time-honored Frow doctrine for considering
2 whether to enter a default judgment against a single defaulting defendant in a multi-defendant
3 case. The doctrine recognizes that, “where a complaint alleges that defendants are jointly liable 4 and one of them defaults, judgment should not be entered against the defaulting defendant until 5 the matter has been adjudicated with regard to all defendants.”¹⁹ The Ninth Circuit extends this 6 doctrine to cases in which the co-defendants are “similarly situated” and defense of the claims
7 will hinge on the same legal theory because “it would be incongruous and unfair to allow a
8 plaintiff to prevail against defaulting defendants on a legal theory rejected by a court with regard
9 to an answering defendant in the same action.”²⁰

10 This is just such a case. Because the bank is MERS’s assign, having received its interest 11 in the deed of trust by MERS’s 2011 assignment,²¹ the default judgment that SFR requests would 12 have implications in this case beyond MERS’s interest and could compromise the bank’s ability 13 to assert its tender defense. The Frow doctrine thus counsels against entering a default judgment 14 against MERS while the bank continues to actively defend SFR’s jointly targeted counter- and 15 cross-claims. So I deny SFR’s motion for a default judgment against MERS without prejudice to 16 its ability to reurge this request after SFR’s counterclaims against the bank have been resolved.

17 Conclusion

18 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that SFR’s Motion for Partial Reconsideration
